

BOARD BIOS

Susan Attermeier

As one of the founding members of Orange County Living Wage, Susan is proud to have the opportunity to support low-income workers and the community as a whole. Her career as a physical therapist and her longstanding work to promote literacy in adults and children have taught her that well developed and persistent efforts lead to success.

Cosby Dudley

Cosby is a former manufacturing manager and production control manager in Research Triangle Park. A former local business owner with multiple locations and a 38-year resident of Orange County, he lives with his wife, Laura, who works in the Chapel Hill-Carrboro City Schools system. A former board member of Triangle Bike Works, he enjoys being outside in the woods.

Victoria Freeman

Victoria has lived in Chapel Hill for 35 years. She came to the area for graduate school and never left. Originally a nurse, she earned a degree in public health from UNC. She spent her career as a researcher and health policy analyst before retiring from UNC in 2014. Her career and volunteer work have focused on access to health care, equity, and social justice. OCLW is a perfect fit for her activism.

Allanah Hines

Allanah holds the inaugural position of Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Manager at Weaver Street Market. Weaver Street Market is a North Carolina-based food cooperative with four retail locations and a food production facility that employs over 250 people with the purpose of creating vibrant, sustainable marketplaces and providing a living wage. Allanah builds upon her more than 15 years of experience with Weaver Street Market to utilize the co-op's power and privilege as a mechanism to diversify the food supply by organizing producers, partners, and organizations to create sustainable change for systems of food security. Allanah embodies her personal and professional goal through her passions to globally normalize healthy, nutritious food as a basic right for all.

Jason Nunoo

Jason is the current practice administrator for Carrboro Family Medicine Center. Carrboro Family Medicine is passionate about modeling their business to provide the best care possible for its patients while also being a living wage employer. Jason is unique to the board as he brings a lived experience to the board. Prior to his current position, Jason served as a clinic manager in urgent care and an administrative assistant for a non-profit organization that deals with homelessness. Jason enjoys reading, walking, and watching sports.

Megan Overbay

Megan is the co-founder and COO of Big Spoon Roasters, a maker of hand-crafted, small-batch nut butters and snack bars in Hillsborough. Megan and her partner in business and life, Mark, built their business model around paying a living wage, as they believe that everyone deserves the security of a roof over their head, good food on the table, and health care for a fair day's work. Megan loves that she is able to work with her hands, her head, and her heart in a values-based business with a fabulous team. Outside of work, Megan is a certified spinning and PiYo Strength instructor and an avid baker. She loves to spend her free time outside with Mark and their hounds, Rioja and Grüner.

Susan Romaine

Susan is a founding member and director of the hunger relief organization PORCH and Orange County Living Wage. In 2019, Susan was elected to Carrboro Town Council. She is thankful to live in a community where local government strives to meet everyone's basic needs, non-profits help to fill in the gaps, neighbors take care of neighbors, and there is dignity in work.
